

NullDynasty: October 2026 content plan

YouTube Shorts + Instagram Reels · 8–31 October · niche: “दुनिया का नक्शा ऐसा क्यों है?”

The plan in one line: one video every other day (one-day gap), posted on both YouTube and Instagram the same day. 12 videos in October, about 7 hours of your time per week.

What one video costs you

I write the script draft and asset prompts, build and render the video in Remotion, and write the title, description and thumbnail. Your part:

Step	Your time
Read and approve the script	~15 min
Record the voiceover (with retakes)	~30 min
Generate only the new GPT assets (maps, icons, clouds, trees etc. are reused from a growing library)	~45 min
Watch the render and give notes	~15 min
Upload to YouTube + Instagram, reply to first comments	~15 min
Total per video	about 2 hours

3–4 videos a week ≈ 7 hours of your time. That is more than the 5 hours we first planned for, so watch it: if a week gets too heavy, skip one slot rather than rushing a video.

Posting rules

- Days: every other day, starting 10 October. The exact hour barely matters for a new channel; post when you can stay around for the first hour.
- Both platforms, same day: YouTube Shorts first, Instagram Reel 1–2 hours later. Upload the same file natively to each; never share a link from one to the other.
- Every upload: a pinned comment with a question, and the AI-content label on both platforms.
- Instagram extras: share each Reel to your Story the same day; use “Trial reels” if your account has it.
- Batching: record two voiceovers in one sitting, so you only set up every four days.

Three content types, rotated

Type	What it is	Why
1. “ऐसा क्यों है?” map mysteries	Strange borders, oddly shaped countries, why a country owns a far-away place	What GeoGlobeTales' biggest hits are made of. Our main type.

2. Unusual and dangerous places	Places like the Darién Gap	Proven by our first video's format
3. India and South Asia map stories	Map stories from our audience's own region	Our edge: English channels barely cover it

After 6–8 videos the numbers will show which type your audience prefers, and we lean into it.

October calendar

Date	Video	Type	Note
Thu 8 Oct	✓ Darién Gap	Dangerous place	Posted
Sat 10 Oct	Video 2	Map mystery
Mon 12 Oct	Video 3	India / South Asia
Wed 14 Oct	Video 4	Map mystery
Fri 16 Oct	Video 5	Dangerous place
Sun 18 Oct	Video 6	Map mystery	Check-in 1: send analytics screenshots
Tue 20 Oct	Video 7	India / South Asia
Thu 22 Oct	Video 8	Winning type
Sat 24 Oct	Video 9	Map mystery
Mon 26 Oct	Video 10	Winning type
Wed 28 Oct	Video 11	India / South Asia
Fri 30 Oct	Video 12	Winning type
Sat 31 Oct	—		Check-in 2: plan November

“Winning type” = whichever of the three types performs best by the 18 October check-in.

What we check on 18 and 31 October

- Viewed vs swiped away (YouTube Shorts): are people staying past the first seconds? Tells us if hooks work.
- Average percentage viewed: does the story hold people to the end?
- Subscribers gained per video: which type actually grows the channel?

Send screenshots from YouTube Studio and Instagram Insights for each video; we change what isn't working.

About the 10k goal

Nobody can honestly promise 10k subscribers by 31 October for a 3-week-old channel. On Shorts, growth usually comes in jumps: most videos get modest views, then one gets picked up and brings in thousands of subscribers in a few days. What is in your control: post all 12 videos on schedule, keep Darién-level quality, and learn from the check-ins. That is what makes a 10k jump likely over October and November.

If a week goes wrong

Skip one slot and keep the rhythm after it. Never post a rushed video just to hit the schedule: weak Shorts teach the algorithm that the channel isn't worth showing.
